The Induction of

Rev A. S. Tod

The first induction service to take place in Blairmore was witnessed in the Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening last when Rev. A. S. Tod was inducted into the pastoral charge of that church. The building was crowded and a fairly interesting programme was disposed of. Rev. T. M. Murray, moderator of the Presbytery of Macleod, conducted the service. Rev. C. W. Gordon, of Lethbridge, delivered an able sermon. Rev. Mr. Lang, of Passburg, addressed the pastor and Mr. Lyman, the newly elected elder. Rev. T. M. Murray addressed the people. At the end of the programme refreshments were served and everybody went home satisfied.

We Win

Outside of the Imperialistic aspect of the question entirely, the death of reciprocity between Canada and the United States is a good thing for Newfoundland. We are just beginning to find a good and well-paying market for our codfish in the United States, and if Canadian reciprocity were effected, we would have to face a handicap of 84c. per quintal on our fish entering the United States in competition with Canada. To-day we stand equal; to-morrow we may have the 84c. handicap against Canada, because we may effect a reciprocity treaty of our own. With Canada in front of us, we could do nothing, unless we sold our fish to Canada instead of direct to the United States, or became part of the Dominion. Our game now is a waiting one, and overtures, if any, must come from the United States. Let Uncle Samuel come along with his proposals, and if they are fair and equitable, we promise to consider them, if the old gentleman is real good.—Trade Review.

The members elect of the new parliament include 76 lawyers. Other callings will be represented as follows: Farmers 36; merchants, 32; doctors, 21; manufacturers, 17; journeymen, 10; journalists, 8; seamen, 7; law students, 1; labor men, 1; live stock exporters, 1; stock breeder, 1.—Manitoba Free Press.

Frank H. Hitchcock, postmaster-general of the United States, after a trial of the delivery of mail by aerial route, made this statement: "The time is certainly coming when we must depend upon the aeroplane for carrying mail. It is not effective yet but it is being developed in a marvelous way, and I think we shall soon find it practical."

THE END IN SIGHT

Reported That Concessions Will Be Made and Work Resumed Within Another Week.

The Calgary Albertan has the following to say of the strike situation in the Crow's Nest Pass:

"There is a good chance of an early settlement of the coal strike. That is in the information given informally to the Albertan by one who knows, after the meeting of the miners held in Macleod last week. It is the general impression that some concessions will be made to the miners and that the operators will raise the price of coal 25c. a ton, or more for the general public. That such a solution would be satisfactory to all concerned seems quite certain for the time at least.

There was no conference between miners and men at the Macleod meeting, but P. Burns, who is interested in the situation, conferred with the men. No person will divulge what was done at the meeting, but the men seem to be satisfied with the progress that was made.

"It is more than likely a settlement will be made during the present week and the strike ended."

R. L. Borden

Borden, Robert Laird, L.L.D., K.C. (Halifax, N.S.) eldest son of Andrew Borden and Eunice Laird, his wife. He was born at Grand Pre, June 29th, 1854. Educated at Acadia Villa Academy, Horton. Before removing to Ottawa he was head of the law firm of Borden, Ritchie & Chisholm, Halifax, and for ten years president of the Nova Scotia Barriers' Society; Q.C. 1907; Hon. Edward Field, member for Carleton, Ont., resigned and Mr. Borden was elected for the constituency by acclamation at a bye-election, Feb. 5, 1905. At the general election of 1908 re-elected in Carleton by a large majority; also elected in Halifax, N.S., heading the poll. He elected to sit for Halifax and resigned the other seat. Elected leader of the Conservative party in the House of Commons, Feb. 6, 1901. He made several political tours of the country. Married, Sept. 1880, Laura, daughter of the late T. B. Bond, Halifax. ## WHEN WE WERE KIDS

How long ago since you and I were youngsters at our play?
How many years since you and I were happy all the day?
How long the time since last you wore that pretty little bonnet,
How long since mother handed us some bread with jelly on it.
How long ago, how long ago, since days of childhood passed?
How swift the years of smiles and tears that come but do not last?
How long it seems since yesterday, as now I write a sonnet,
How long since mother handed us some bread with jelly on it?

Appalling Horror in Allegheny Valley

Over three hundred people were swept to their doom by the bursting of a great dam in the town of Austin, Pa., on Saturday afternoon last. Austin, which was a busy mill town of 3,000 people, many of whom were enjoying a Saturday half holiday, is only a ghost of a town today. Neighboring towns of Coatesville and Wharton were also scenes of great disaster and many lives were lost as well as great devastation to property by fire and water. Down the embankment were found hundreds of human remains which had been eaten by fire and swept away by water. The property loss in the district is estimated upwards $6,000,000. The dam was owned by the Boyles Paper and Pulp company.

C.P.R. to Build a Big Steel Bridge

The C.P.R. will build a new steel bridge in place of the wooden structure which now spans the Old Man River, two miles west of town, next winter. The new bridge will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000 and will be equal to anything on the line.

The bridge will be located either a short distance westward of the present bridge or level with the two cut banks where the stream should have been working.

The stakes have been driven for both surveys and a decision on this point will be reached shortly.

By the new bridge a bad curve will be avoided and it will be in line with the C.P.R.'s general policy of straightening and improving its lines all over Canada.

Work will be begun, probably, as soon as the river freezes over.—Macleod Advertiser

Fuel Dealers Refuse School Credit for Coal

Nelson's schools must close in a week's time owing to lack of fuel. This will be the upshot of the controversy between the city council and the school board last night.

With only three or four tons of coal in the city schools, the finance committee of the board has gone to the coal dealers asking for credit to the extent of two cars of coal. The dealers have refused and demand money in advance. The board has no money; therefore the schools must close.

At the end of August the board had to its credit $2,675.45. Salaries for September amounting to $1,870, and current bills, totalling approximately $650, practically wipe out the balance, and in addition there is the bill from O'Shea & Farrie, re the mandamus suit, totalling $262.92 which leaves the bank balance on the wrong side.

Two requisitions from the schools one for $8 and the other for $5.25, cannot be filled, as the goods required must be ordered from outside the city.

Rear Admiral Winfield Scott Schley, of the United States Navy, dropped dead on New York on Monday.

A special colonist train of seven cars containing about three hundred Chinese passed east through Winnipeg Thursday.

Rev. Dr. Patrick, principal of Manitoba college, Winnipeg, died last week at his old home, Kirkcubright, Scotland.

S. J. Shepherd, B.L., has been chosen to contest the Lethbridge district for the legislature in the coming bye-election in the Liberals' interests.

COLOR AND SOUND.

Hush That Are Unseen and Tones That Are Unheard.

The primary colors shown in the rainbow vary from red to blue and violet, and the vibrations or lengths of the light waves that give us violet glow shorter and shorter and at length give us red. These vibrations can be measured. One day, quite by chance, I came across the statement that there were innumerable light waves longer than those which give violet. At once the question sprang, Were these longer waves represented by colors which we don't see, colors for which we have no name, colors of which we can form no conception? And was the same thing true of the waves which, growing shorter and shorter, give us the sensation of red? There is room, of course, for myriads of colors beyond this other extremity of our vision. A little study convinced me that my guess was right, for all the colors which we see are represented to our sense of feeling in degree of heat; that is, blue shows one reading on the thermometer and red a higher reading, and by means of this new standard I discovered that man's range of vision is not even placed in the middle of the register of heat, but occupies a little space far up toward the warmer extremity of it. There are thousands of degrees of color lower than blue and hundreds of degrees of heat above red. All these gradations are doubtless represented by colors which no human eye can perceive, no human mind imagine. It is with sight as with sound. We know now that there are notes longer than thunder which we cannot hear, the roar that lies on the other side of silence. We men are poor restless prisoners, hemmed in by our senses as by the walls of a cell, hearing only a part of nature's orchestra and that part imperfectly, seeing only a thousandth part of the color marvels about us and seeing that infinitesimal part inaccurately and partially.—Forum.

THE DEATH OF A CZAR.

Dramatic Story of the Way Nicholas I. Committed Suicide.

There are many stories of the death of the Czar Nicholas I. Here is one which the great singer Mario heard from a doctor of the court and which is told in "The Romance of a Great Singer."

"When the Russian army was meeting with reverse after reverse in the Crimean war the czar sent for his doctor and demanded to know which was the quickest and most painless poison that he knew of, bluntly telling the startled physician that he had resolved to commit suicide. He further warned the doctor in the stern manner which was his habit, that if he was not obeyed the doctor's life would be worthless. He sharply alienated the man's nervous reconstructions and commanded him to bring the poison. The doctor did not dare to refuse and a few minutes later brought a small vial containing the poison, which he assured the czar would deprive any one of existence in a few minutes. 'To be sure that he had been obeyed and that the doctor was speaking the truth the czar obliged him to remain in the room warning him that if he failed to follow his life should answer for it. The czar took the poison without the least tremor or movement of a muscle, and, although twice told by the doctor, who held his breath in his hand, that there was to be no more help, by an antidote he was to be after his mind, the czar refused, answering the second entreaty by simply waving the man away. He was given out that the czar had died from the effects of a severe cold, but those who knew the facts also knew that he had committed suicide rather than face the defeat of his army."

There are thousands of degrees of color lower than blue and hundreds of degrees of heat above red. All these gradations are doubtless represented by colors which no human eye can perceive, no human mind imagine. It is with sight as with sound. We know now that there are notes longer than thunder which we cannot hear, the roar that lies on the other side of silence. We men are poor restless prisoners, hemmed in by our senses as by the walls of a cell, hearing only a part of nature's orchestra and that part imperfectly, seeing only a thousandth part of the color marvels about us and seeing that infinitesimal part inaccurately and partially.—Forum.

Hush That Are Unseen and Tones That Are Unheard.

The primary colors shown in the rainbow vary from red to blue and violet, and the vibrations or lengths of the light waves that give us violet glow shorter and shorter and at length give us red. These vibrations can be measured. One day, quite by chance, I came across the statement that there were innumerable light waves longer than those which give violet. At once the question sprang, Were these longer waves represented by colors which we don't see, colors for which we have no name, colors of which we can form no conception? And was the same thing true of the waves which, growing shorter and shorter, give us the sensation of red? There is room, of course, for myriads of colors beyond this other extremity of our vision. A little study convinced me that my guess was right, for all the colors which we see are represented to our sense of feeling in degree of heat; that is, blue shows one reading on the thermometer and red a higher reading, and by means of this new standard I discovered that man's range of vision is not even placed in the middle of the register of heat, but occupies a little space far up toward the warmer extremity of it. There are thousands of degrees of color lower than blue and hundreds of degrees of heat above red. ## HIS DOLLAR BILL.

He Tried to Bestow It in Charity, but It Went Astray.

Diplomacy doesn't always work, as a certain learned business man in West Philadelphia has just found out. He says that the lesson was cheap at the price, but at the same time he will employ more direct methods next time he wishes to play the philanthropist.

It happened on the subway the other night. He had just closed a real estate deal at considerable profit and was feeling very generous, so when he saw a poor woman in a threadbare dress carefully count out five pennies for her ticket and saw that it was the last money in her worn pocketbook he determined to help her. Of course it wasn't easy, but the man prides himself on being a diplomat. So, crumpling a dollar bill up in his hand, he stooped over as if picking something up and then, holding it out to the woman, said:

"Madam, here is some money you dropped." He tried to smile significantly as he said it, but she didn't seem to understand and said simply:

"You'd better take it," he said. "It isn't mine, and it was lying right by you."

The woman shook her head at first, then took it slowly out of his hand and looked at it glowering. The man smiled, well pleased with himself, but he just as later the woman, seeing a man looking down at the platform, rushed up and cried, "Was you looking for a dollar bill?"

"I sure wasn't," answered the man promptly.

"Well, here it is," said the woman, and the man with a delighted "Oh, thank you," took the dollar bill and walked away—Philadelphia Times.

FIRE EATERS.

The Trick of Breathing Flames and Sparks From the Mouth.

Fire tricks were practiced in very ancient times. The first known fire breather was a Syrian slave named Ennua, a leader in the service war in Sicily, 130 B. C. He pretended to have immediate communication with the gods. When dangerous of inspiring his followers with courage he breathed flames and sparks from his mouth.

In order to accomplish this feat Ennua placed a small ball at both ends, and, having filled it with some burning substance, he put it in his mouth and blew through it. The same trick is performed today in a more approved manner. The performer rolls some wax or hemp into a ball about the size of a walnut, which he lets burn until it is nearly consumed. Then he rolls around it more wax. While it is still burning. By this means the fire is retained in the ball for a long time. He slips this ball into his mouth unperceived and breathes it out. His breath revives the fire, and he sustains no injury so long as he inhales only through his nostrils.

Various theories have been advanced to account for other feats of this sort performed by the ancients. An old story was the holding of a red-hot iron in the mouth, who was not burned if he was innocent. Probably some protective paste was used on the inside of the mouth, the property of mineral salts, such as alum, in protecting articles of dress from fire has long been known. An old Milanese tradition says that a "King Lear" was the record of a New York policeman for several weeks.

Inspector Brynes sent for the man and gave him a little bit of advice, thus: "Tonight, about midnight, put on your uniform, belt, revolver, take your stick and go to some corner house. Lean against it, and lean against it hard, as if you were really on duty. You'll go to sleep, all right."—New York Tribune.

District Ledger and Socialism
The district ledger evidently does not like the facts published about the miners' strike and takes umbrage at a lengthy article which appeared in these columns last week anent the clash between the mine operators and the miners.
No doubt our Fernie friend learns with grisly grief and with twit trepidation that Socialism, which once so dominated District 18, of United Mine Workers of America, is losing ground and that the miners of The Pass are slowly, yet wisely and emphatically declaring that they will no longer be implicated by imperious, indignant and indecent Socialists. It is, therefore, plain that the time is not far distant when any attempt to flaunt the red flag of turmoil, tyranny and tomorowery over the black diamond diggers of this district will be as futile as it will be foolish.

We do not wish to be understood as being opposed to labor unions. We believe that well-conducted labor unions are the best friends that the working man can have. But when labor organizations become infected by an insolent and inescapable political party the usefulness of that union to self-thinking men immediately disappears, public sympathy is lost as socialism pursues its utterly unjust and useless tactics.
The time cannot come too soon for the U.M.W. of A. to free itself entirely from the burdensome and tyrannical yoke of Socialism, when the schemes of knaves will no longer baffle their united efforts. It takes time and dearly bought experience to teach some people a lesson, but they are taught in the end. It is a dull ass indeed that will not mend his paces by beating and in process of time even the District Ledger may bend its energies toward perfecting and strengthening the association intended for the protection and progress of the miners.

Editorial Notes
Sir Wilfrid Laurier stepped down from the elevated bench of the Dominion on Wednesday and has given place to his successor-pupils.
The ratepayers of Edmonton and Strathcona have at last decided in favor of amalgamation. The question has been under consideration for some time and the agreement reached finds popular approval amongst all who have at heart the welfare of the twin cities. These are not the only towns which have agreed that unity is strength and it is not far distant when the different towns in this section of The Pass will have decided upon amalgamation and a greater Blairmore, a greater Frank, or a greater Coleman as the case may be.

He Dug.
He wanted a job and, like everyone else,
He wanted a good one, you know
Where his clothes would not soil and his hands would keep clean,
And the salary mustn't be low,
He asked for a pen but they gave him a spade,
And he half turned away with a shrug,
But he altered his mind and seizing the spade—he dug!
He worked with a will that is bound to succeed,
And the months and the years went along,
The way was rough and the labor was hard,
But his heart kept filled with a song,
Some jeered him and sneered at the task but he plugged
Just as hard as he ever could plug;
Their words never seemed to disturb him a bit—as he dug.
The day came at last when they called for the spade
— And gave him a pen in its place.
The joy of achievement was sweet to his taste
— And the victory shone on his face.
We can't always get what we hope for at first,
Success cuts many queer jigs;
But one thing is sure—a man will succeed—if he digs.
—Louis F. Thayer.

W.R. Hearst is Cat and Dog Hater
(FROM WINNIPEG SATURDAY POST.)
This is a sample of the kind of stuff we are spared through our comparative immunity from the disease of the heart daily:
"Dogs and cats should be eliminated in the cities at once and as rapidly as possible in the country. They are dangerous and out of date; their usefulness is gone. They spread disease. Dogs, as every educator knows, even have a degrading influence on the minds of children!!
"Whoever destroys a dog or a cat in this day performs a good action."
"Played up with all the impressiveness of italics and capital letters, this is what the editor of the Chicago American got off his system the other day. Beyond a doubt, the privilege of keeping cats and dogs is abused but the blame lies with man and not with the lower animals. Cows spread disease if they are not properly cared for. Following the hysterical mandate of the American editor, it is therefore a duty to see that all cats are done away with at once. Canaries birds are given to fostering disease germs, and rabbits are notoriously unhealthy. Off with their heads! shouts this hyper sensitive human being who, for all we know to the contrary, may have been filled up the night before on stuff that cats and dogs wouldn't touch and this was why his nerves were so touchy. It is easy—and natural—to picture such a man stepping on pussy's tail and flying up in the air when puss sent the air with innumerable remonstrances. Or maybe he tried to kick a dog that crossed his path and got properly bitten for his ill temper.
Let the circumstances be what they will; the man who advises that all the dogs and cats be killed is a fool beyond compare. He is not fit to give advice to the most empty-headed of human beings, to say nothing of having the responsible task of passing upon the great questions of the day in editorial columns of a great daily newspaper.
Commenting on the paragraph, the New York Life says, with incisive sense:
"Keep your feet on the ground, brother. Had a dog or cat written in such a manner about humans there would have been far more sense in it. When it comes to varieties of outrage and murder, and to spreading disease, the dog and cat have much to learn from the two-legged brute."

Of course, it's quite natural for Italy to look for a slice of Turkey as Thanksgiving Day approaches. Oh well, let 'em have Turkey if they like. Chicken is good enough for us this here week.

On Monday the opening of the game season was heralded around Blairmore bird plains by a continuous volley of shots, and the feathered flock were lessened considerably judging by the fine bags that arrived in town.

The window of the Blairmore Hardware Co. is the centre of attraction this week. J. S. Murray has on exhibition a mountain goat, a specimen of his own taxidermy. It is one of the noblest looking specimens yet seen in these quarters.

The foreigner was immediately arrested and placed behind the bars of the Blairmore police barracks.

All the domestic feathered race of the town were barred in on Monday as the owner could not believe that the would be hunters knew a hen from a loon, a house parrot from a blue pigeon, or a tame goose from a partridge. #### Blaming the Reporter

There is a certain kind of humor which wins its way more surely than any other policy. Sir John Macdonald was a master in its use, and seldom resorted to it in vain. On one occasion Sir John delivered an address which, for some mysterious reason, was slightly incoherent. The following day, a newspaper man called on him and diffidently showed him certain notes which he had taken of the speech.

Sir John surveyed the notes for a moment and then turned to the reporter in a kind and fatherly manner. "Young man, will you let me give you a word of advice?"

Certainly, Sir John," said the flattered scribbler.

Cartheral, Mtd.
Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Dear Sir,—While in the country last summer I was badly bitten by mosquitoes, so badly that I thought I would be disgraced for a couple of weeks. I was advised to try your Liniment to allay the irritation, and did so. The effect was more than I expected, a few applications completely curing the irritation and preventing the bites from becoming sores. MINARD'S LINIMENT is also a good article to keep off the mosquitoes.

Yours truly
W. A. V. R.

Old Gentleman—"Well, my little man, how old are you?"

Tommy Ruffian—"My age varies, sir. When I'm railway travelling I'm under 12, but when I go to fetch the beer I'm over 14."

In the causes of infant mortality cholera morbus is a great frequence. It may be said that complaints of the bowels are great distress to the child. If all mothers would avail themselves of so effective a remedy as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, they could give with safety to the smallest child, as there is no injurious substance in it.

"And so this is the end," said the hero as he bent over the form of the dying heroine, while the orchestra played soft and musical strains.

"Thank heaven for that!" exclaimed a pathetic voice from the gallery.

"Well, don't ever try to report one of my speeches unless you are sure that you are perfect in the delivery. I'll tell you what I really did say."

"Tell me, before it is too late," she pleaded, "if you have ever done anything that you regret." "Yes; there was one thing," he reluctantly admitted. "I once tried to rescue a man who had wrecked a boat."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Eczema Always Burning and Itching

Mr. H. O. GREGG, of Chicago, Ill., writes: "I have suffered from eczema for two years. The trouble began on one arm where there appeared a red spot about the size of a dime and it was very itchy. I tried many remedies but it was always worse. The first day I tried Eczema Ointment it gave me relief, and I tried it again and again. It was always better, but I did not know it was the Eczema Ointment. After having used one box, my eczema completely disappeared."—Chicago Record-Herald.

NOT A GAME OF CHANCE.

The Jury Decided That Seven-up Was Purely Scientific.

One of Mark Twain's old time stories concerned the game of seven-up, or, as it was called, Kentucky Seven-up.

Some Kentucky boys were arrested for playing this game under the usual charge of paying a game of chance.

The court, puzzled, asked for a suggestion, and the lawyer declared that it was a game of chance.

Using the Gospel as a Disguise

Shanghai.—Letters from Canton give disquieting accounts of an ingenious device of the revolutionaries to distribute seditious pamphlets in the guise of gospel tracts.

The revolutionaries in the recent attack on Admiral Li Chun was observed to throw away a book which was found to contain bombs concealed beneath two gospels.

These books are readily obtainable, and thus the revolutionaries easily pose as mission collectors.

The revolutionary scare in Canton is possibly overrated, but the authorities are most nervous and the wealthy continue to quit the city.

Missions have been requested to temporarily suspend the street sales.

POSTED ON RUBBER.

He Couldn't Be Fooled About the Growth of the Trees.

A promoter for a rubber company was trying to persuade Mr. Spangier to invest some of his savings in the company's stock.

The ground was rubber, he said, was word-wide and constantly increasing. The company owned immense tracts of rubber trees and kept an army of workers employed all the time in gathering the crude rubber.

The output was enormous, and the profits were, the scheme was certainly better than a gold mine.

"I have heard," said Mr. Spangier suspiciously, "that the forests are being exhausted."

"That's true to some extent," answered the other, "but we are not dependent on the existing trees. We are planting hundreds of square miles with new trees."

"How long does it take for a tree to grow enough to tap?"

"Only six or eight years," said Mr. Spangier, with emphasis. "My wife sees and a rubber plant in the front parlor for six years, where it's warm all the time, winter and summer, and it hasn't grown a foot in all that time."

"You're right," said Mr. Spangier, "but you can't put out on that!"—Youth's Companion.

Man Eating Wild Thing

In the celebrated "ray" paper of Edward Webb (1884) are dozens of stories that would make Munchausen turn green with envy.

One of the most remarkable of these is the story of the war man of Fretter John, which is as follows:

"The court of Fretter John is a wide man and another in the high street of Constantinople whose address is every day a quarter of raw cotton, and when any man speaks to some notorious offence then they are allowed every day a quarter of man's flesh."

These wide men are chained to a wall every day, and the one in Fretter John's court, the other in the high street of Constantinople, each of them having a mantle about their shoulders, and all over their bodies they have wonderful long nails. They are chained by the neck, and they speedily devour all that comes within their reach.

England's Unworn King.

Of the one king of kings who has ruled England since the days of William the Conqueror, nearly 800 years ago, there has been only one unworn king.

King Edward V. the young king, who met an untimely fate, was the last of the royal line of the Tower of London in 1483, the only monarch who reigned without receiving the church's blessing or the formal homage of his subjects.

Some people include Lady Jane Grey among England's monarchs. If this doubtful claim is allowed England's royal crown was worn by Edward V. and deprives him of one distinction—London till his death.

A Triumph of Imagination.

Tallendard told me that a great archbishop of his acquaintance in Paris had set himself to make an exact design of the imaginary abbey of Theleme, minutely described by Rabelais, and that he had succeeded.

It was to be erected in the most perfect building yet known—Conway's Autobiography.

Peace at Last.

Mr. Moon—Mr. Moon and his wife have parted. Mrs. Moon—Good gracious, what is the trouble? Mr. Moon—There isn't any trouble, she's gone. They have parted—Smart set.

No Doubt in His Mind.

Young Harpster—I often wonder if I am making enough money to get married.

Old Benedict—Well, I don't know how much you're making, but you ain't—Puck.

C. P. R. Report

A glance at the report of the Canadian Pacific Railway for the year ending June 30th, 1911, shows how rapidly this railway is growing.

The report of the road for the year 1910 puts the actual C. P. R. mileage at 19,504, and the mileage under construction at 47.1 miles.

This year's report shows that the actual mileage of the Company has advanced to 10,489.5 miles, and that it has 983.5 miles of new track under construction.

This means that the C. P. R. has under construction almost three miles of track for every working day in the year.

While most of the new track is, of course, being laid west of Winnipeg, there are also a number of new extensions being built in Eastern Canada.

The new grain route from Victoria Harbor, to Baltham, being the largest of these extensions under construction. In Western Canada, the Saskatchewan Division of the road will construct the greatest amount of new track.

Here the C. P. R. has under construction 125.5 miles, distributed as follows: Moose Jaw, southwesterly 35 miles; Outlook to Kerrobert, 102.3 miles; Kerrobert, northwesterly 25 miles; Forward, westerly 46 miles; Estevan to Forward, 55 miles; Estevan to Balfour, 31 miles; Regina to Colonsay, 133.1 miles; Swift Current, southwesterly 45 miles; Wilkie to Anglin, 31 miles; Wilkie, northwesterly 28 miles.

On the Alberta Division, construction work is going on as follows: Irrigation, east 30.7 miles; Bassano to junction, with Kininew, northwest 35.5 miles; Swift Current, northwest 38 miles; Carmanagan, to west 56.3 miles; Galloway to Waldo, 13.4 miles; Galtor, east 60 miles.

William Jennings Bryan, whom the people of the United States came to look upon as a permanent "also ran" candidate for the presidency, has a great fund of stories, and he doesn't keep back those in which the joke was at his expense.

Speaking to the Toronto Press Club, he referred to his several unsuccessful attempts to become president.

"My experience," he said, "reminds me of what happened to a man who went to a dance in a place in a southern state while he was intoxicated."

"He became somewhat noisy, and was asked to keep quiet. But he kept on being noisy, and after being warned, was put out."

"He made his way back into the hall, and was put out none too gently."

"Once more he went in, and this time he was thrown out in somewhat rough fashion."

"He got up slowly, straightened himself, and looked at

LOVED ONE IN CHILDHOOD.

All His Life He Had Felt That His Home Lacked Something, and So He Filled the Void at Auction—The Purchase Was a Continuous Performer.

By M. QUAD.
[Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary News.]

WHEN Mr. Bowser came home to dinner the other evening he had a man with him, and the man was bent almost double under the weight of a big package.

"What on earth have you been buying this time?"

"Never you mind till after dinner," he replied.

"It can't be a cow."

"Enough!"

"And it isn't large enough for an auto."

"Nonsense!"

"And you wouldn't chloroform a pig and bring him home this way?"

"Woman, restrain your curiosity. I have made a purchase, and in due time you shall know what it is. We will now go down to dinner."

Mrs. Bowser "restrained." It is no use to try to pick anything out of Mr. Bowser until the dramatic moment arrives. Then he discloses the nature of the dinner was about halfway through when he leaned back and said:

"Mrs. Bowser, do you know that a man never forgets his early home?"

"Yes, I know," she replied.

"Well, I have just bought a cock that will keep time for me."

"What a cock!" she exclaimed.

"A cock that will keep time for me," he replied.

"What a cock!" she exclaimed.

"No you lay it off on a poor old clock, do you?"

Mr. Bowser jumped a foot high, but when he came down he said:

"It has been the want of a cuckoo clock in this house that has made it seem a strange place to me."

PEARLS OF LITERATURE.

Which Came Within One of Remaining Forever in Obscurity.

The history of literature is full of narrow escapes and there is no doubt but what many an unknown masterpiece lay hidden in the wreck of the past. Every now and then in these adventurous times a diver comes up to the surface with a pearl—a single sample of the treasure that may be buried below. It is but a quarter century since William Blake's poetry was restored to literature. Bret Harte's Hesperian Chimes, which set two continents laughing, was the only thing in the world which produced a sudden demand for his former works. Fully as good, but up to ten years buried in obscurity.

Blackmore's Lorna Doone and Wallace's Ben Hur both ran through curiously similar experiences. Both were neglected on their first appearance. For a year or more they lay in a slow sale. Then suddenly the public awoke to the merits of one and the other. The sales doubled, tripled, and from that time to the present they continue to roll on in a steady stream.

"There is no almost as certain as the demand for Shakespeare or the Bible."

Everybody knows the story of the first edition of FitzGerald's Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam. He brought out a few hundred copies of this little book, and when they wouldn't sell at that price he reduced them to a penny. Even at that they failed to attract purchasers. Twenty years passed away, and then Swinburne once again rescued a copy from the heap. He left it to George Meredith and he read it to Meredith and they both praised it. The fame of the Rubaiyat from the moment. The time of its first sale was established forever, the fame of Omar was revived and redoubled.

"There is no other work of this kind," the world must sigh in vain. We know that the manuscript of Kipling's "Rider in the Rain" was lost, and that the author had cast it in despair. Probably there is no other of Kipling's poems which the world could so little fail to lose.

Edgar's "Crowning the Bar" was rescued from a similar fate by a nurse who attended him in the sickness which had suggested the poem. Now we further know that both Kipling and Tennyson destroyed many manuscripts, and that many of these were as badly mistaken in their instances as they were in the others?

In the Evening of His Days.

Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary, who has had such an anxious time of it since the outbreak of the Moroccan affair, once drew an alluring picture of the old age which he coveted in a speech before the House of Commons. "It is a garden outside the library, and of course a suitable residence," he said. "It is a garden outside the library, and of course a suitable residence," he said. "It is a garden outside the library, and of course a suitable residence," he said.

At one time Sir Edward Grey was magnificent tennis-player, and there is a strong hold to the effect that when he was Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs he was sometimes able to match a couple of hours in the afternoon for his favorite game, and he observed when leaving the tennis court on one occasion that "I had nothing to live for through the evening week but to look forward to the next Wednesday afternoon, when he could again take up the racket."

A Comedy of Errors.

When Baron Hausmann went to Constantinople on a visit to Abdul Aziz, who was then sultan, he had an interview with the grand sultan. He did not know a word of French. At the end of the interview he was brought in, and then Baron Hausmann began to speak. The grand vizier could not understand a word, but listened most attentively. He said that the sultan had gone out and clapped his hand for the grand vizier to come and enlighten him. Hausmann, who was a Frenchman, rushed toward him with outstretched hand, intending to shake hands and thank him. The grand vizier, seeing his hand put forth, shook it warmly and said "Good-bye," under the impression it was Hausmann's intention to leave, and quitted the room.

A Home Thrust.

Many years ago in a boarding-school for boys the principal was a learned clergyman, a preacher of long sermons and a strict grammarian. One day after ten o'clock taps, when all the boys should have been in bed, he was wakened by a noise. He went to the door and heard sounds of revelry from a darkened room. He rapped on the door—silence within. Then he said "Who's there?"

"It's me—the principal. Open the door."

"It's he, ha-ha-ha! You're a liar! It was the doctor he would say. It is he!"

Seeing the force of this argument, the doctor passed on.

Innocent of Politics.

It is a mistake to suppose that a knowledge of politics is essential to a statesman's life. Lady Langford is said to be her husband's right hand, and she knows nothing about politics and does not want to. By her husband's side she sits, and in this most peaceful Lady Langford was born in the duel party, her father having been shot down by a nobleman known as "Old Splendid."

SHAKESPEARE'S WORK.

It Preserved the Declaration of Independence in 1814.

SAVED IT FROM THE BRITISH.

The Precious Document Would Have Been in the State Department When It Was Burned by Fy. Plescoff's Final Glance Around the Room.

Comparatively few of the present generation know how near to being lost was once the most precious of our national documents, the Declaration of Independence. It was during the war of 1812. The Declaration of Independence hung for many years in a frame in the state department in the room then occupied by Stephen Pleasonton, Mr. Pleasonton's secretary, was a prisoner of war in London, forwarded to the state department some London newspapers, stating that the English fleet and transports were receding from the troops of operating against Washington and Baltimore. Soon after it was learned that the British fleet was in Chesapeake bay and that it was ascending the Patuxent. The officials and citizens of the little capital city were hourly expecting an attack.

Upon receipt of this information, which was a few days before the enemy entered Washington, Mr. Monroe, then secretary of state, James Madison being president, mounted his horse rode to Benedict, a small village on the Patuxent, where the British forces were being landed, and climbed an eminence within a quarter of a mile of the village, in order to ascertain the situation of the enemy. Being outvined, after his inspection, that we had no force available that could successfully resist them, he sent a note to Mr. Pleasonton by a victim, advising him to see that the best care was taken of the books and papers of the state department.

Acting at once upon this authority, Mr. Pleasonton purchased some coarse linen and had it made into bags of suitable size. In which he stored the books and papers of the state department.

When engaged in this work General Pleasonton then sent word to Mr. Monroe, passing the state department on his way to his own office, remarked that he thought they were unnecessarily alarmed. The British were not likely to think the British were serious in their intentions of coming to Washington.

Fortunately Mr. Pleasonton was of a different opinion, and observed that it was the part of prudence to take measures to preserve these valuable papers.

Mr. Pleasonton delayed but a few days, but he followed the advice of the secretary of war, an irrefragable rule would have been mistaken. For the papers which Mr. Pleasonton had placed in the coarse linen bags comprised the secret journals of congress, not published; the correspondence of General Washington, his commission, resigned at the close of the war; the correspondence of the French and other officers of the Revolution, as well as laws, treaties and correspondence of the department of state from the adoption of the constitution down to that time.

Mr. Pleasonton had the bags carried to a grist mill, which he selected as a suitable depository. The mill, which was unoccupied, belonged to Edgar Patterson and was situated on the Potomac, beyond the Chain bridge, two miles above Georgetown.

The last load had left, and Mr. Pleasonton was just quitting the mill when he saw a British soldier suddenly appear to see whether anything had been left behind, to his consternation he saw the Declaration of Independence, which had been overlooked, hanging upon the wall. He hastily unlocked the door, and carried it away with the other papers.

He then began to be uneasy about the place he had chosen for it. The British took Washington, which he finally believed they would do, and very soon at that, they would in all probability detach a force for the purpose of destroying a foundry for the making of cannon and shot in the neighborhood and, of course, would consider a grist mill too valuable a thing to be left standing in a country they meant to subdue. Mr. Pleasonton therefore visited some of the Virginia farmers, and they were only too willing to loan him wagons in which to convey the documents to Lancaster, a distance of thirty-five miles.

When the Declaration of Independence was taken to Lancaster, the keys of which were given to Rev. Mr. Littlejohn, who was the collector of internal revenue.

Worn out with his labors, Mr. Pleasonton stayed in a letter, he retired early to bed that night and slept soundly. Next morning he was informed by the people of the little town where he had stayed that evening that they had been taken to the mill the same night as the 24th of August, a large fire in the direction of Washington, which proved to be the British army, which was burning and looting the city.

When he returned to Washington on the 25th he found the British army still burning and looting the city. The Americans were again settling in the rear for the purpose of cutting off their retreat—Kansas City Times.

"We will send that man to be great or small than himself—Pleasonton."

TOWNS IN A TOWER.

A Remarkable Edition, the Union of a Wealthy Tax Payer.

Real the well known support of the Union, England, there is a remarkable edition known as the "Tower." The Union is all the more singular because it marks the happy place of a certain John Peterson, a wealthy tax payer.

The man appears to have been rather an eccentric individual, and in order to prove to the tower his belief in concrete and a building material as to the construction of this great tower. The building took many years to complete, but is entirely of concrete and by the time the first layers had been placed had reached an altitude of more than 300 feet. It is about forty years since the tower was erected, and its present condition is certainly a justification of the faith of the builder.

As has been indicated, Peterson left instructions that his body should be placed under the tower, and this was accordingly carried out. Another desire that the chamber at the summit should contain a light was defied by the first stand which Trinity House, the Lighthouse authority, took on the matter. Such an illumination would have been valuable for miles out to sea and would naturally have proved very misleading to sailors—Scientific American.

PULLING THE COURT'S LEG.

A Practice the English Judge Did His Best to Discourage.

The following remarkable judgment was delivered some years ago by a magistrate in one of the English colonies:

"Facts is hereby charged with having on the 11th of January, followed the court on the rising and who accompanied the court in the act of mounting into his buggy came from behind and, setting the court's dangling leg, the other foot being on the step, forcibly pulled back the court, frightened the horse and nearly caused an accident. The reason alleged for this accused is that he wanted to hear the result of an application of his. The practice by petitioners of pulling the courts by the legs is one that should be discouraged. Accused only says he is a poor man, admitting the truth of the complaint. He is sentenced to one month's rigorous imprisonment."

Strange to relate, the lieutenant governor of the province on reading this sentence felt it necessary to intimate to the court that he was not to sentence itself nor the peculiar phraseology in which it was couched was calculated to meet with approval from minds training in legal grooves.

Tennis an old Game

It may be claimed that lawn tennis is at least three centuries old, having been played in 1591, when Queen Elizabeth was entertained at Elvetham, in Hampshire, by the Earl of Hertford. Strutt, quoting from Nickol's "Progress of Queen Elizabeth," tells us that after dinner, about three o'clock, ten of her lordship's servants, all Somersetshire men, in a square green court, before her majesty's window, "dill hang up the lines, squaring out the form of a tennis court, and making a cross line in the middle. In this square, they, being stripped out of their doublets, played five to five, with hand ball, to the great liking of her highness."

Girls as They Were

Backward, turn backward, O Time in thy flight, and give us a maiden dressed properly and right. We are so weary of switches and rats, Billie Burke clusters, of peach-basket hats; wads of jute hair in a horrible pile, stuck on their heads to the height of a mile. Something is wrong with the maidens, we fear; give us the girls as they used to appear. Give us the girls we once knew of yore, whose curls didn't come from a hair-dresser's shop; maidens who dressed in a sensible way, and just as Dame Nature intended them to. Give us a girl with a figure her own and fashioned divinely by Nature alone. Feminine style's getting fiercer each year—oh, give us the girls as they used to appear. —Trans News.

A Political (?) Meeting in Nova Scotia

We attended a would be political meeting in Nova Scotia about a fortnight since, and during the whole proceedings, which consisted of addresses, songs and a free distribution of beer and cigars, it was difficult to decide what the object of the excitement really was. As the hall was about filled a voice from a front pew announced the nomination of Mr. McElair to the chairmanship. McElair, who was doing in a back seat, happened to overhear his nomination, but had to be jolted by a comrade near before he could regain sense enough to answer the call. Mack zig-zagged his way up the aisle to the platform, and on reaching there thanked his friends for the honor conferred upon him, but regretted his inability through "over-sleeping," to efficiently perform the duties required of him. Anyway he called up his political adherents one by one, and each in his turn gave his description of ship-building, school teaching, boat racing, farming and fishing, and some beautiful ideas of the different occupations of life were given and in some cases recommended as the desirable walks in life for those seeking a post near the governmental stage of the province or Dominion, but never was the fact acknowledged that the meeting was in defence of either the Conservative or Liberal cause. About midway through the meeting, a rustic old man, who has seen many a hard old time among the mining camps of the twin province, rose to his feet and asked permission of Mr. Chairman that he might favor the audience with a song to relieve the tiresome monotony. Paddy was accorded a place on the platform, and delivered a heart-wrenching "Come All Ye," that set the bars in the hall, as well as the entire audience in a hum of applause. Paddy's song referred to the dear old mining days of Springhill, about forty years ago, when some thirty lives were lost through an explosion of gas. All the pain and tortures endured by the prisoners of that mine were faithfully represented in the writhed outlines of Paddy's features, and such a beam of sorrow was cast over the people present that not a soul had a thought toward either Mr. Borden or the late chief, Sir Willie. The speakers who were to follow were left bewildered and moved that the meeting adjourn till tomorrow night, when it was hoped that a more sober gathering would be present and that the objects of the meeting could be more plainly brought to light. The meeting was a liberal one—so far as beer and cigars were concerned—but and to say the harm done to the Liberal cause by these few scabs to patriotism was such that could never be repaired, and caused that side of politics to waver and the flag of Conservatism to fly over that particular spot.
